The Missouri Folklore Society was founded in 1906 by Henry M. Belden, Professor of English at the University of Missouri. It was reactivated in the Spring of 1977. The Society publishes a semi-annual Newsletter and the annual Journal, as well as maintaining a website and a YouTube channel, among other media. The Society meets each November in a different Missouri locale for several days of food, fellowship and folklore – displays and demonstrations of arts and crafts, publications, recordings, artifacts, papers and presentations on general and specialized topics relating to folklore and folklife, with a special emphasis on, but by no means limited to, Missouri. We have storytelling and remembrance sessions, and you can sit in on the evening jams or just listen. We are a place of sharing for scholars, tradition-bearers and simple enthusiasts. We welcome students and teachers especially.
